MONTANA SMITH

AND THE RAIDERS
OF THE LOST LAND

About the Panto

This year's Panto, Montana Smith and the Raiders of the Lost Land was written by two local SPAT writers, Bernadette Le Mesurier and Kelly-Maree Michael (Kelly will also be directing).

It's inspired by classic adventure serials from the 1930s and 1940s as well as their more modern counterparts, particularly Indiana Jones and the Raiders of the Lost Ark and visits lots of exciting locations with fun characters and a moral thread about the environment and inclusivity.

Synopsis

Montana Smith ('Monty'), a bumbling yet handsome archaeologist, is on a dig in Egypt with his thesis student Byron when he comes across a clue to finding the legendary sunken city of Krapllewnats.

Monty is aided by the Dean of Sydney University, Dr Carmen Tooten (also our Dame), his mentor Dr Charlton Harrison-Spinks, and YourRound, their driver/expedition aide who can pilot any vehicle despite clearly being somewhat younger than the legal driving age.

Hot on their tails are Dr Gail Friday, an archaeologist from a rival university (Melbourne, gasp!), and her assistant and languages expert, Victoria. Intercity rivalries and a romance (or two) ensue.

They are pursued by some shady characters who seek to claim the city's treasure for themselves, as well as some greedy property developers with their own nefarious goals.

From the deserts of Egypt (or is it desserts?), to the cold expanses of the North Pole, the exotic marketplaces and temples of Bali and finally to the Helensburgh glow worm tunnel and the beaches of Stanwell Park, our heroes will stop at nothing in their daring exploits across the globe to keep the secret of Krapllewnats from falling into the wrong hands!
